Two Great Matches in the Books

Darn near every year we have a spell of nice weather in February. 2012 has been no exception, leading some people to start digging in the flower bed and working on sprinkler systems. Those of us who have been around here a while know winter isn't really over, and we just enjoy the balmy weather while it lasts.

What better place to do that than at the shooting range? The RRV went at it twice in February, with 21 shooters slinging lead on the 4th, and another 14 on the 18th.

The first Saturday match wound up being a birthday bash, as Ima Schofield, Goode Bascomb, and Crumville Kid were all properly insulted on the firing line with personalized stages, then wined and dined (OK, caked and teaed) in the cantina after the match. Justin O'Sheriff shot his way to the top of the pile, followed closely by Venomous Doc, Ozark Lawdog, Bad Bascomb, and Harvey Mushman. Kentucky Gal was top lady on the day and 11th overall. Sheriff, Lumpy Grits, and yours truly shot it clean.

The third Saturday match got off on the right foot with a great breakfast of biscuits and gravy, scrambled eggs, sausage, coffee, and orange juice, prepared on the spot and served up by Just George and Kentucky Gal. For the shooting part, Cowboy Earl had suggested we use his shotgun knockdown/clay pigeon tosser and his stationary clay pigeon holder, which we did. I had already planned a stage that included a provided Handi-Rifle and one cartridge for an optional bonus shot, not to mention a "long range" Nevada Sweep. So, by the time the dust had settled, we had probably managed to make just about everybody happy—there was bound to be something that you liked out there.

As is his habit, Justin O' Sheriff ran away from the field, followed by Harvey Mushman, Bad Bascomb, Cowboy Earl, and top lady Kentucky Gal. Speaking of habits, the Sheriff also shot the match clean. All of the scores from both matches are on our web site.

Death Valley National Park and Defend the Roost

by
Nasty Newt, SASS #7365

Now that the headline has gotten your attention and you're reading this, you may be wondering what Death Valley and our annual match have to do with one another. I'm the first to admit that my mind works in mysterious ways, but I do believe they may have something in common.

A lot of us take it for granted that Death Valley is right next door. To some who live here, it's no big deal. I know people who have lived here for years who haven't laid eyes on Scotty's Castle, or walked around the visitor's center at Furnace Creek. They might take Highway 190 to Nevada, but they don't stop for a cold drink at Stovepipe Wells, take a walk up the hill to the Zabriskie Point overlook, or drive a few miles out of their way to see Badwater. Never mind that people come from all over the world to visit Death Valley. To them, it's a uniquely wondrous place. To us, it's just another big chunk of desert. Yawn.

Over the years, Defend the Roost has drawn shooters from Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Colorado, Minnesota—well, you get it. The word is out about what we do, and the way we do it, and shooters from all over make a considerable investment of time, energy, and money to come here and enjoy the experience. To them, it's a fun match and a great bang for their hard-earned buck, and well worth the trip. However, as I write this, only eleven RRV members are signed up for Defend the Roost, only six of whom reside in the Indian Wells Valley.

I know not everyone can attend the match, but don't take Defend the Roost for granted. It's a really good event at a really good range that most clubs would kill for. Walk up to Zabriskie Point sometime, and get signed up for Defend the Roost. You won't regret it.

The IAC 93/97 is Approved for SASS Wild Bunch

After several years, SASS has decided that this shotgun, a Chinese made clone of the Winchester Model 97 which includes the unfortunate addition of a Model 93-style cut-out on the ejection port, can be used in SASS sanctioned Wild Bunch matches. The gun remains on the banned list for Cowboy Action Shooting on the grounds that the enlarged port gives a competitive advantage when single loading, which is the way most shooters use a 97. This decision is explained by the fact that in Wild Bunch, the shells are loaded in the tubular magazine at the loading table, so the competitive advantage doesn't come into play.

These are good shotguns, built like a tank and very reliable. There are currently none being imported, and unless SASS comes to its senses and allows it for CAS, there probably won't be any more. I don't know anybody who believes in the "competitive advantage" associated with the port cut-out, but then, I don't know anybody in the SASS hierarchy.

Meanwhile, if you have one, you can use it in RRV monthly matches, and you can also use it in our "Professionals" side match at Defend the Roost in May. However, since DTR is a SASS-sanctioned event, you will not be allowed to use it in the 10 stage main match or other side matches.

The Range Needs Some Touching Up Next Work Party is Saturday, February 25th

You might be thinking that all we ever ask you to do is come out and work, but not really. We also invite you out for some really fun shooting matches--twice a month, these days. Anyhow, on the 11th Justin O' Sheriff, Kentucky Gal, Just George, MC Ryder, Bad Bascomb, Harvey Mushman and Buckhorn Bud were at it again building the jail. Cowboy Earl is gearing up to make a truckload of targets and stands.

Now it needs paint, and some other areas of the range need sprucing up, and if we have enough people we will start on a bullet proof wall to make another bay. If you can come out, there will definitely be something for you to do. Thanks.
